Kingston's theatre companies unite to create a one-of-a-kind play

Kingston, September 11th, 2012 – Prepare to see your local library as you've never seen it before. This fall, five theatre companies and five playwrights will come together to stage The Library Chronicles, an innovative production featuring four new Canadian scripts, each uniquely devised to interact with one another in the Central Branch of the KFPL. Audiences will follow elaborately crafted storylines that move throughout the library.

The Library Chronicles will feature some of Canada's best known playwrights, including the Dora award-winning Ned Dickens as well as Governor General Award recipient Judith Thompson. The festival will also feature work by emerging playwrights Jill Connell, Michael Payne and Alex Dault. Each writer has a unique connection to the city of Kingston.

"This city has a wealth of theatrical talent and passion. To see the energy of our community harnessed towards creating something distinctively Kingstonian is inspiring. This is truly going to be something to see."

*Brett Christopher
Director, The Library Chronicles
Artistic Producer, Theatre Kingston*

Developed in partnership with Kingston WritersFest, The Library Chronicles is the first project where the Kingston theatrical community has united to produce a single, cohesive theatrical experience.

One thing is certain; this is a theatrical event that no one will want to miss!
